AccuPlace presents its AEvo labeler with zero-queue printing at APEX Show in Los Angeles, CA

Bar coding printed circuit boards during the manufacturing process or for final assembly has become a critical process in the industry. At the same time, the PC boards have decreased in size to fit into smaller, more modern electronics devices. AccuPlace is introducing its newest labeler and print & apply model 'AEvo' which allows precise label printing and placing of even the smallest labels.

“Based on the same machine model, two principally different processes can be carried out: applying labels and complex die cut components, as well as print & apply,” says Guni Bermudez, Marketing Manager at AccuPlace. “At the APEX show we will demonstrate printing of 2D barcodes onto 3mm x 3mm labels with zero queue. New functions, simple operation as well as its small foot print validate the use of this machine in a broad variety of applications.”

On-demand serialized printing with zero queue

The just introduced print & apply labeler AEvo makes auto-identification easy: A 300 dpi thermal print head integrated in the machine prints unique barcodes or product information with zero queue. 600 dpi will be available shortly. With a placement accuracy of +/- 0.002"/0.05 mm or better and an improved patented peeling and placing technology, this system provides ultimate accuracy and process reliability. The labeler works with all standard available label design programs and has a web based (TCP/IP) machine interface for highly advanced and intuitive machine parameter setup. Minimal mechanical adjustments allow for easy component changeover. In addition, no tools are required for routine maintenance.

The machine will be exhibited at the Identco booth # 1455 at the APEX IPC show in Los Angeles, CA from Feb. 20-22, 2006. Stop by there or contact AccuPlace at +1 954 791 1500 or sales@accuplace.com for more information.
